WOMEN INVESTORS PROGRAMME (WIP)

"Committed to Development of Africa and Empowerment of Women"

INTRODUCTION

In recent years there has been a resurgence of interest in infrastructure development and policy reform in Africa. With the invasion of other economies in Africa, most big infrastructure projects are being allocated to foreign economies.

South Africa, being the Economic hub on the Continent, can substantially contribute in a proper planning and design of infrastructure development in Africa through sharing of best practices, expertise as well as technical and financial resources.

With the surge of women involved in infrastructure development in areas such as:

- Construction
- Transportation
- Science and Technology
- Many more...

It has become critically important to involve more women in the construction of infrastructure services to position them as stakeholders in their respective societies.

In our aim to contribute in attaining the Millennium Development Goals in Africa through empowerment of women, Leading Women of Africa has created a platform that will allow women in business in South Africa and abroad, supported by Governments, funders, investors and other technical partners, to partner with their counterparts in Africa in order to play significant role the infrastructure development sectors on the Continent.
